Published this morning, a New Edition of the

MAN MADE OF MONEY—By

Douglas Jerrold, author of Mrs. Cyril's Curtains Lectures, St. Giles and St. James, &c. &c.

Complete in one vol. Price 25 cents.

Published and for sale, wholesale and retail, by

BURGESS & GARRETT, 22 Admst.

Will be published this day, Tuesday, April 29.

ICONOGRAPHIC ENCYCLOPEDIA, Part XIV., containing 20 steel plates, illustrating Architecture, Antiquities and Middle Ages, computing dwellings, churches, public sports, theaters, &c. &c. and 32 plates.

With this number are also given five pages to plates of volume I., comprising plates 1-5, and the page index, and 25 plates to the latter pages of volume I., contained in parts 1-6, which can now be bound. The plates to which titles are furnished constitute half the illustrations of the entire work, and are to be bound in one volume, as directed on the title page.

The publisher has a strong interest in it to give to the publisher their copies for binding as his arrangements enable him to have the work done more carefully, substantial, and at cheaper rates than a single copy can be had for by workmen unacquainted with the plan of the work.

The iconographic Encyclopedia will comprise two volumes of plates and four of letter press, or text, published in 25 parts (of which 19 are out), each containing 20 plates and 25 pages. $25 payable at the rate of $1 on delivery of each part. Subscriptions are received for the whole work only, and no single number sold.

A specimen copy of the complete book may be seen at the shop of RICHARD HARRIS, Publisher and Bookseller, No. 2 Broadway, at Astor House, 2d floor.

Published This Morning,

EUGENE SUE'S GREAT PROSCRIBED BOOK.

The MYSTERIES OF THE PEOPLE.

In the course of this great Romance, Sue, (whom he adds much to the interest of the plot,) exposes the causes which drive so many thousands of the men of Paris to gambling, robbery, and the Galley, and the women to prostitution and the Morgue. While it is entirely free from any offensive thoughts or language, it reveals the terrible social evils that are gnawing the very heart of the French society.

Never has genius conceived or described more interesting characters than those which impart to the story the animation of real life. The bold, handsome, but cruel and treacherous Colloredo de Plomieu—the sly, flighty, Jezebel Cardinal—the lively and virtuous daughter of the honest Linen Draper—the intrepid and wily young Joimer—and the beautiful but giddy Griseuse, who revels in her white breast the baseness at her beside lover on the barricades—are all faultless types of the various classes in the metropolis of France.

So admirably written and full of interest. Indeed, is this incomparable book that all the vigilance of the French police and police has been unable to prevent the circulation of millions of copies in every department of France.

The Mysteries of the People, or the History of a Frenchman from His Birth to His Death, by Eugene Sue, Member of the Legislative Assembly of France.—This Tale, which commenced in January, presents one of the most interesting and dramatic scenes of modern history. The truth has been decisively demonstrated, and all time-forgotten freedom and real philanthropy must admire the work and its author. The New-York newspaper has given us the secret of the success of Eugene Sue's election as Member for Paris in the beginning of May, that shall show a wide-spread sympathy with his cause, and a desire to see him elected to the National Assembly.
